Recipes for Relief Initiative	Undergraduate Club	1/5		Recipes for Relief is a group of passionate volunteers who love to cook and provide warm meals for residents of the JW House. The JW House is a low- to no-cost medical hospitality house for families of patients currently receiving care at Kaiser Permanente Santa Clara and other San Francisco Bay Area hospitals. Cooking always begins with a story. Nicholas' passion for cooking originates from his experience growing up with a rare endocrine growth disorder called Russell Silver Syndrome (RSS). Children diagnosed with this disorder typically display phenotypes of failure to grow independently and severe lack of appetite. At home, Nicholas was deeply involved in the cooking process as a child, and prepared garlic purees, spice blends, and pasta sauce that created unique aromas, textures, and tastes that sparked curiosity in food. This curiosity in food, and ultimately bonding with cooking, helped Nicholas overcome a lack of appetite previously thought to be genetically encoded.
